

ENGLAND HOLDS MANY SUSPECTS

Hundreds of Germans and Austrians Have Been Arrested in London.

London, Eng., Nov. 11.—Great Britain's new rigorous roundup of Germans and Austrians within her dominions caused a rush to the home office of those who, by virtue of advanced age, sex or other disqualification for military service, are allowed to go to the fatherland through reciprocal arrangements for a grant of a like number of British men and women. It is stated that within the last few weeks 2000 German and Austrian women and 1200 men left this country.

At the outbreak of the war many Germans and Austrians deluged the authorities with applications for naturalization papers. The number seeking British citizenship has been placed at 15,000, yet fewer than 20 applications have been granted.

Thousands Under Arrest.

Between 1000 and 15,000 Germans and Austrians are under arrest and in detention camps—all taken from Greater London. Hundreds of others are yet to be arrested. Only this week there was a brief respite in the roundup due to the fact that there were not enough adequate detention camps.

The agitation is not over, however; daily the newspapers are urging the authorities to more action. The exclusive German and Austrian newspapers are being watched, and great precautions are being taken to guard the vaults of the stock exchange. There are so many German firms using the strong boxes of the exchange that every member entering the rooms is searched for bombs or other explosives.

BAYONET ATTACK COMMON IN EAST

Russians Lack Artillery, But Infantry Make Up For the Difference.

London, Eng., Nov. 11.—Russia's lack of artillery has been compensated at every point of attack by the excellence of the infantry, according to a Petrograd dispatch to the Daily Telegraph. Bayonet encounters have been as frequent along the Russian front as artillery duels on the German French line.

"Having reached the German front," says the dispatch, "the Russians have a tremendous task before them because the Germans on their own territory will fight in accordance with their theories, with absolute and perfect lines of communication along which the line will move automatically."

Russia Moving Reserves.

"The imperfect transportation conditions of the Russians will improve on the arrival of winter, which, in Poland, is about a month hence. This will harden the roads. During this month of waiting Russia will rush forward her reserve forces to the points of contact."

"That the Germans have abandoned hope of coming back to Poland is shown by their destruction of the bridges and their having even played up the main roads of the retreatments. During four days, from Thursday to Sunday, on the Thorn-Cracow front, the Russians kept up a hot pursuit of the retreating Austro-German army, which hastily dug strong rear guards onto the crossings of the rivers Warthe, Pilica and Nida, with the object of checking the Russian advance and affording the main body an opportunity to pull itself together. In general, the artillery played the chief part in these rear guard actions."

Cavalry Harass Flanks.

"On Sunday the Russians, keeping up the pursuit, let their cavalry loose on the flanks of the defeated army with the object of completing the enemy's disorganization."

Gen. Von Liebert, former commandant of Lodz, who was taken prisoner, is a well known figure in German public life. He was formerly governor of German East Africa, and later sat in the reichstag. An imperialist he founded the anti-socialist society and was a member of the executive committee of the anti-German federation.

IDLE SHIPS ARE LOSS TO GERMANY

England Has Made Difficult the Purchase of Craft in Neutral Ports.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—A source of heavy expense to Germany, which has caused a considerable drain on the kaiser's treasury since the outbreak of the war, is the German craft that remain idle in the various ports of the United States.

The activity of the British warships off the American coast and the attitude of the government of Great Britain relative to the transfer of German ships to American registry, are responsible for this situation. With liberal actions in United States courts, and the increasing wariness of Americans to purchase the vessels because of the tangle of the change of registry, the German craft are in a sorry plight.

Must Maintain Crews.

The drain upon Germany is increased because of the necessity of keeping crews on the vessels. Skeleton crews at least must be kept on the ships to care for them, and reports coming to Washington from time to time have indicated that some of the German craft have been kept in such a state of preparedness for quick sailing that they even have maintained steam in the boilers. But the watchfulness of the British men of war, lurking just off the three mile limit, has kept the kaiser's merchantmen moored to their neutral docks out of reach of the enemy's guns.

So wary are the Americans said to have become of the purchase of these ships that only seven German merchant vessels have been transferred to American registry since the outbreak of the war, and in each of these cases the claim has been made that they always have been owned by Americans.

Purchase of Ships Opposed.

The filling of bills against these ships also is increasing the opposition to the purchase of the German merchant fleet by the United States government, which is proposed in the merchant marine bill due to come up for consideration at the session of congress to be convened early in December.

Great Britain's argument that such a purchase would create a gold credit relative to the transfer of German ships is recognized and the fact that it would relieve the Fatherland of a heavy financial drain is becoming more and more apparent. This, it is argued, would constitute in reality the rendering of assistance to the enemy by the United States and in the many by the United States and in the opinion of many persons here, would be a violation of the declaration of neutrality issued by President Wilson. The difficulty occasioned by the probable filling of bills against the German merchantmen by persons holding claims against the vessels is illustrated by the experiences of the Kronprinzessin Cecilie, the "gold ship" which had to turn back and put into Gibraltar to prevent the $10,000,000 gold which she was carrying abroad from falling into the hands of the British cruisers that gave chase to her. This ship now is in the hands of the United States courts and technically is the property of the United States.

WOMAN EXPLORER JOINS RUSSIANS

Petrograd, Russia, Nov. 11.—Madam Koudachef, well known as an explorer, has been attached by Gen. Kennenkrampf to the Russian scout service. She rides the horse upon which she made the trip from Vladivostok to Petrograd.

Gen. Kennenkrampf has also serving with him a soldier 13 years old. When the war broke out, young Nicholas ran away from home, sought out Gen. Kennenkrampf and asked if he might not serve. He was detained and a message was sent to his parents. They telegraphed their consent to his remaining with the army.

The boy has already taken part in battles, notably Isterburg. He carries upon his rifle a German bayonet which was presented to him by the regiment with which he serves. Nicholas has been mentioned in orders of the day for a daring and skillful scouting feat.

TURKEY IS RUSHING TO RUIN, SAYS IFRAM BEY

Rome, Italy, Nov. 11.—Ifram Bey, head of the staff of Enver Pasha, the Albanian minister of war, who is here to negotiate for the lending of assistance of Italy to Albania said Tuesday concerning the situation created by Turkey in the war.

"Turkey is finished. As a Mussulman I am sorry, but in reality I know the Caucasus and am convinced Turkey cannot oppose serious resistance by the Russians. At Erzerum, Turkey claims she has 300,000 men to resist the Russians, but her forces there are far below that number, while Trebizond is in even a worse condition."

"Enver Pasha also thinks that a fight under these conditions is folly and that Turkey should have remained neutral, asking in exchange some compensation from the triple entente. Now she rushes toward ruin."

GERMANS FIND GUN FIRE FROM WARSHIPS DEADLY

London, Eng., Nov. 11.—A dispatch from Brussels to the Times says: "There are hardly any German soldiers left in Brussels. All except the necessary garrison have been sent to the front."

"Refugees from the coast describe the artillery work of the British warships as terribly accurate. A wounded German officer declares that only 54 men of his regiment of 1000 are alive after the fighting on the coast."

"Despite the praiseworthy efforts of the food committee, the people here have the greatest difficulty in obtaining bread and flour. The entire population of Brussels is on rations. The bakers distribute their wares very sparingly, as the law allows them to charge not more than 6 cents a loaf. Potatoes and meat, however, are plentiful."
